ITALY WANTS TO DICKER WITH THE U.S.

PREPARED TO OFFER HALF THEY OWE THIS COUNTRY

Officials Optimistic On Final Agreement—It Is Hinted That the First Offer Will Be Fifty Millions Payable Annually For 62 years—Italy's Debt To Us Is $2,138,543,852, of Which $1,647,868,198 Is Principal and the Remainder Accrued Interest.

arrangements on a basis of capacity to pay will be applied to Italy. Under secretary Winston of the treasury said Monday, as strictly as has been the case with all other powers whose obligations have been funded. He expects this basis to prove entirely practicable with the Italians, and pointed out that it appeared unlikely that the second mission would have been sent to Washington had the Italian government not been convinced it could agree to terms within the American policy.

AUTOMOBILES INCREASED IN STATE OF OHIO

The Italian government's debt funding commission arrived in Washington late Sunday, prepared to reopen Monday the conference on a settlement of that nation's obligations to the United States, which have been in abeyance several months.

No ceremony attended the arrival of the mission, headed by Count Volpi, the finance minister, and a few functions are planned for Monday in advance of its first scheduled joint session with the American debt commission except formal visits to the state department, the treasury and probably the White House.

The finance minister's intention is to start talking business as quickly as possible. The first meeting has been set for four o'clock and it is likely that the two commissions at that time will attempt to map out a course of procedure for the further conference. In this connection it was suggested that a committee would be named by each commission and that the real negotiations would take place between the two small groups.

The Americans and Italians alike recognize the difficulties which confront them in renewing the conversations. Italy's debt, as calculated at the treasury is $2,138,543,852, of which $1,647,868,198 is principal and the remainder accrued interest. Both commissions realize that careful thought will be required to arrive at a formula of settlement providing satisfactory and workable means of liquidation for such a sum.

The Italians will start the negotiations well informed as to the general views of the Americans. The conference will serve in a measure to pick up matters where they were dropped when the first commission, which included Ambassador De Martino and Dr. Mario Alberti departed in the mid-summer. Both are members of the present commission and Dr. Alberti has spent several months in Rome compiling data on Italy's financial and economical condition and prospects which already have been placed before the American commission.

Officials believe, therefore, that the new conference will be able to eliminate many of the usual preliminary stages, but there is no attempt anywhere to minimize the problem, and the American commission, by the guidance of Secretary Mellon, will enter the conference with a desire to avoid all obstacles which may threaten the negotiations.

Cleveland—Believing the "fishpole" burglar has made his reappearance here, Safety Director Barry, Monday ordered additional flying squadrons to patrol the suburban sections beginning tonight.

The burglar visited two homes here during the night, escaping with a quantity of cash and clothing. The marauder operates with the aid of a fishing pole which he inserts thru an open window.

Thirteen Million Dollars for Licenses and Six Million Gasoline Tax.

Columbus, O. Nov. 2, (UP).—Buckeye automobile owners have paid more than $19,000,000 for maintenance and repair of roads during the first ten months of the year, the state treasurer's office announced.

This figure includes $13,044,982 for automobile license tags and more than $6,000,000 in gasoline taxes, all of which is appropriated for maintenance of state highways and subdivisions.

Sale of license tags increased 110,000 over last year, according to the announcement.

Tree Surgeons Try to Save Washington Trees

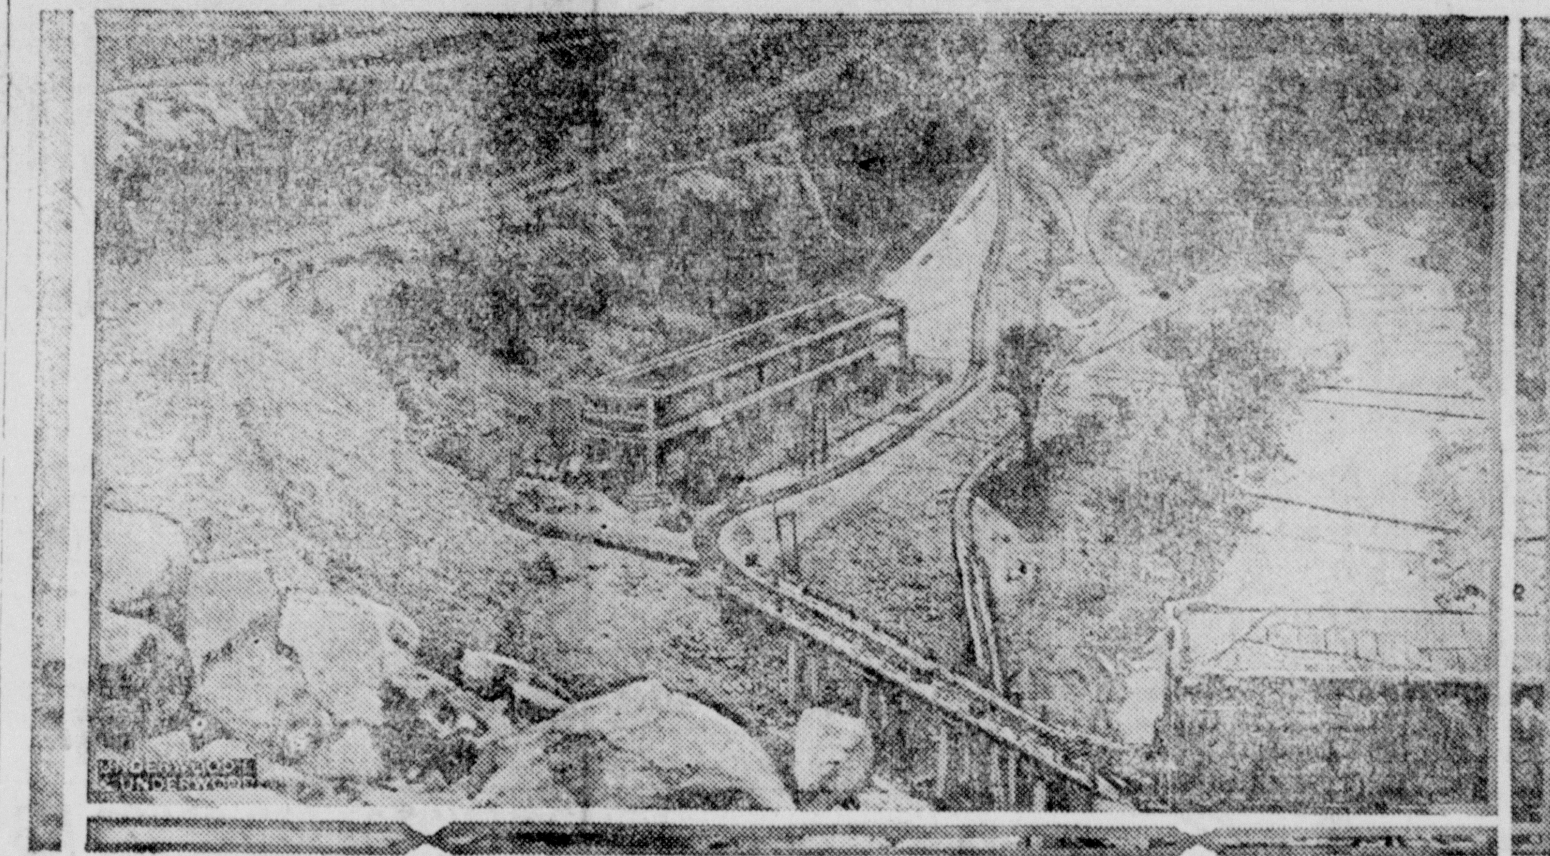

Tree surgeons are employed to repair and save the beautiful trees in Washington. Two of them are here seen getting ready to cement a hole in one of the huge elms just south of the capitol.

Toledo.—Completely baffled, police Saturday continued an apparently fruitless search for two bandits who held up the branch bank of the Ohio Savings bank here late Friday and escaped with $16,089.

The bandits forced employees and customers into a vault, calmly gathering up the money and escaped in an automobile.

John Rasser, of Columbus, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Goddard left Monday for his former home at Palm City, Florida.

Huge Hydro-Electric Plant in Kentucky

The great Dix river hydroelectric dam near High Bridge, Ky., is nearing completion. Work was started in the fall of 1923, and a lake 34 miles long will soon be driving generators with a total capacity of 30,000 horse power—more than is developed by the famous Roosevelt dam in Arizona. This plant will supply electricity to Indiana, Virginia and the greater part of Kentucky. Nearly 1,000 men are pushing the job to completion at top speed. The dam is the largest rock-filled dam in the world. This picture was taken from its top and shows the power house and transformers.

NEWS ABOUT COURT HOUSE

General Happenings Taken From the Records of the Various County Offices.

Appointed Administrator.
Arthur G. Skeels has been appointed administrator of the estate of his brother, the late Professor Charles Wimer Skeels. The estate is estimated to be worth $4,000 and is personal. J. O. Eagleson, E. L. Daly and Glenn I. Nickerson were appointed appraisers.

Divorces Granted.
Lelia M. Reed was granted a divorce in probate court from W. S. Reed on the grounds of gross neglect of duty. The plaintiff was restored to her former name, Lela M. Johnson. I. F. Snyder represented the plaintiff.

Lora Mayo was granted a divorce in probate court Saturday from Harold Mayo on the grounds of gross neglect. The plaintiff was given the custody of her child and was awarded $5 a week for the support of the child. C. A. Weldon represented the plaintiff.

Suit For Damages.
Ned R. Renick, an infant by his next friend, Job R. Renick, has filed a civil action against Austin Rader and Maxwell Rader, in which he asks damages in the sum of $5,000.

The suit arises out of an accident which occurred August 2, last, when the plaintiff was riding in the car driven by Maxwell Rader. The car was the property of his father, Austin Rader.

The defendant claims that he has already been put to the expense of $1,500 in medical attention and hospital fees. In the accident his right leg was broken in two places and his chest injured.

The car the boys were riding in collided with a tree in front of the home of R. G. Peters, North Court street. Abernethy & Simkins represents the plaintiff.

REAL ESTATE DEAL.
Thru the Circle Realty company the George Cruik farm, consisting of 181 acres, located in Fairfield county was sold to Lewis B. La Rue and others.

INSTITUTES OF FARMERS BEING HELD IN OHIO

Problems Common to Every Rural Community Are Thoroughly Threshed Out.

Farmers' institutes, those clearing houses for all sorts of problems in rural communities, got under way this week in Ohio and will continue to February and March. By that time every county in the state will have held on an average, eight institutes.

Last winter Ohio led all other states in Farmers' institutes. An attendance of 626,969 was registered at the 703 institutes. Half of these institutes got some support from the Ohio State university; the rest were independent financed wholly by the communities in which they were held.

Monroe, Noble and Tuscarawas counties began the institute year with the regular two day sessions on Monday and Tuesday, October 26 and 27. Gradually the number will increase until in January and February 12 or 14 institutes will be scheduled each day thruout the state.

Speakers at these institutes have been chosen by F. L. Allen, institute supervisor at the Ohio State university, from among successful farmers and farm wives in Ohio counties.

The trend, however, is to make farmers' institutes community gatherings, where community problems can be threshed out. Technical talks on crops and livestock have given way in large measure to discussions of problems common to every rural community and to all in it.

Dayton—Albert E. Fletcher, 48, farmer, was killed when a fast train on the Pennsylvania railroad, struck his automobile at West Manchester, near here late Sunday night. The man's body was hurled thru the air for a distance of fifty feet, landing in the doorway of an undertaking establishment. The automobile was smashed to bits.

Cleveland—Members of an entire family were injured here Monday when their automobile crashed into a bridge support. Those injured were: John Mehalas, his wife and four children. All will recover.

Or Number of New Golf Courses?
The number of farms in Ohio decreased last year by about 12,000, and we suppose this represents the number staked out in city lots by real estate subdividers.—Columbus Dispatch.

DEATH'S TOLL TAKEN SUNDAY IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, O., Nov. 2 (UP).—Two boys and a woman were killed in traffic accidents here over the weekend.

In other sections of the state numerous accidents were recorded, duce several motorists and pedestrians being injured seriously.

The dead:
Richard Allard, 17, who was killed when his car turned over. Three other occupants of the machine were injured, tho none seriously.

Frank Holdren, 16, a messenger boy who was run down.

Mrs. Catherine Davis, 63, killed by a "hit-and-skip" motorists.

"CORN KING" ASPIRANTS FOR CROWN

Eight Have Already Qualified With Thousand Bushels on Ten Acres.

Candidates for the title, "Ohio Corn King" are making themselves known in half a dozen counties.

Eight Ohio farmers now can lay claim to the title by virtue of producing 100 bushels of corn an acre on a ten acre field and so more than doubling the state average. They will receive their honors next February at the Ohio State university's annual Farmers' Week, when they are admitted to the 100-Bushel Corn Club of Ohio.

The returns are far from complete as yet, Wallace E. Hanger, crops specialist at the university, points out. These eight successful growers are eight out of nineteen applicants. Some 200 other applicants are still to be seen.

To date F. E. Eichelberger of Washington C. H., is high man with a yield of 121.58 bushels of corn an acre on 10 acres. Closely following him is Edward C. Rector of Pickaway county with 119.07 bushels an acre on 10 acres.

The average yield of these 19 growers, only eight of whom qualified for the 100-Bushel club, was 96.1 bushels an acre. That is better than twice the state average in corn production in the best years.

Last year no one was able to produce 100 bushels of corn an acre on 10 acres. The high year in the corn club's eight years of existence was 1918, when 18 Ohio farmers qualified. All signs point to a record breaking number of corn kings this year, the crops specialists believe.

AUTO DRIVER.

Mrs. Joseph Wolf and Mrs. Myron Van Riper were thrown out of a Ford sedan on the Adelphi pike last Friday evening and both sustained slight injuries. Mrs. Wolf's arm was hurt and Mrs. Van Riper's right hand was badly cut and lacerated. The light of a passing machine blinded, them and they were forced into a ditch upsetting their car. A Dahl-Campbell grocery truck happened along and pulled the wrecked car out of the ditch. The two women drove the car home. The name of the driver of the car which forced them into the ditch could not be learned.

Mrs. Van Riper's injuries were attended to by Dr. A. W. Holman.

THE SICK.

WATER SPORTS SAFER FOR RED CROSS WORK

Expert Life-Savers and Many Thousand Swimmers Reduce Annual Water Toll.

Water sports in the United States have never been so safe as they are today, a survey of the work done by Life-Saving experts of the American Red Cross in the past year indicates. Thousands of adults and young people were taught to swim proficiently by these experts during this period. In addition, 5,681 men, 4,187 women, and 13,024 Juniors successfully passed the rigid tests of the Life-Saving Service of the Red Cross. The total thus trained during the year—22,392—is 5,041 more than last year's results. The total membership of the Life-Saving Corps of the Red Cross on June 30 was 72,810 persons.

Meeting the demand for qualified instructors and counselors in these camps, are the college men and women of the country, many devoting whole or part of their annual vacation periods to this field. Meeting the need of standardized instruction in Life-Saving, First-Aid, and kindred subjects, the American Red Cross conducted nine First-Aid and Life-Saving Camp Institutes this year with a total attendance of more than 600, in Maine, Massachusetts, New York, North Carolina, Indiana, Wisconsin, Oregon, and California. Representatives of Red Cross Chapters, summer camps, life guards at municipal pools and beaches, directors of physical education in schools, and others of this calibre made up the student body.

A number of city or regional institutions were conducted also during the winter at indoor pools to develop local experts. The aquatic school conducted by the New York Chapter was especially successful, it is stated inspired by this system, many camps, pools, bathing beaches, etc., have adopted in whole or in part, the Red Cross Life-Saving and water-safety program. In the New England states alone, more than 180 camps employ counselors trained in these methods. A partial survey indicates more than 80 cities using the Red Cross senior test as a minimum requirement for their municipal life guards. Educational institutions have turned to it with enthusiasm.

This widespread instruction besides creating unprecedented numbers of expert life-savers, is developing a vast body of Americans who are at home in the water. All contribute to safety the year-round, for swimming is a recognized all-year sport today, records show.

The danger from water accidents is ever-present however where proper safeguards are not taken and to broaden this valuable Red Cross Service is one of the reasons why increased membership in the Red Cross is urged. The Annual Roll Call, during which the opportunity to assist all Red Cross work in many lines of endeavor is extended, will be held from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, November 11-26.

Large Volunteer Work of Red Cross
Volunteers under the Red Cross all over the United States are doing constantly for others, among their products being more than 90 per cent of the Braille reading matter for the blind, and a vast production of clothing and surgical dressings.

JUNIOR RED CROSS AIDS PEACE BY BIG GROWTH

Gains 142,000 Members in Year in Schools Throughout United States.

A new high level in peace time membership of the American Junior Red Cross is recorded for 1925—its ranks numbering 5,738,648 school girls and boys—a gain of 142,000.

This unique and powerful children's organization started as a war measure, but today is one of the greatest influences for peace ever known. An increasing participation in local programs of service has featured their year's growth. It is indicated that to a greater degree than ever pupils in the schools are performing individual and collective acts of service in a true Red Cross spirit.

The success of the Junior swimming program, launched last year through co-operation of the Life-Saving Service of the Red Cross, has led to a determination to make it a regular feature of both these branches.

An outstanding feature of the Juniors' work this year was the participation for the first time of a Junior Red Cross worker in the disaster relief operations following the tornado in Missouri, Illinois, and Indiana. Schools in many more fortunate localities displayed a keen interest in sending toys and books for the use of the children in the disaster area.

The Junior Red Cross program has flourished not alone in settled communities, but has been extended to Indian schools, and to native Alaskan schools where many Eskimo children undertook Junior work. In addition, the international correspondence between schools is proving more and more popular. American schools are now corresponding with those in thirty-four countries.

Strong Membership Appeal In Red Cross Disaster Relief

Asking themselves "What if disaster should visit our city?" the leading citizens of many communities of the United States have adopted the Scout motto to "Be Prepared."

Impressed by the frequency and the wide range of peace time calamities in their country, they have organized their communities with the thoroughness which normal conditions permit, against the possibility of a time when there will be no chance for thought or plan. Red Cross Chapters in many localities are similarly prepared.

CITIES' DEBTS SHOW STARTLING FIGURES

Immense Increase in Bond Issues During the Past Few Years

Proposed Amendment to Constitution, if Adopted, Would Prevent Abuse of the Borrowing Power

Columbus, Ohio.—One of the first discoveries of the Joint Legislative Committee on Economy and Taxation, of which State Senator Chester C. Bolton is chairman, was that in recent years there had been a tremendous increase in the use of their borrowing power by the taxing subdivisions in Ohio. It is to curb the abuse, not the use, of public faith and credit that the Constitutional Amendment regulating bond issues has been submitted to the voters by this Eighty-sixth General Assembly. The other amendment, which will also be adopted or rejected by the voters at the election in November, is designed to make possible the modernizing of the tax system of the State and make more equitable the tax burden falling upon various forms of tangible property.

The adoption of the resolutions submitting to the people of Ohio these two proposed Constitutional amendments was what made necessary the creation of this fact-finding committee, nine in number, the members being selected from the two branches, four from the Senate and five from the House. The work of the committee will be well advanced by the time of the election, November 3, though it is not required to report until March, 1926, and if these amendments are adopted it will be able to quickly formulate measures that will impose a greater share of the tax burden on intangible property—measures that will be productive without being burdensome.

The debt amendment provides for writing into the Constitution the principles of the well-known "Griswold act," the effect of which will be to prevent the Legislature authorizing bond issues except for permanent public improvements.

Paying off a bond issue is much like paying for a dead horse. Particularly is that true if the improvement for which the bonds were issued has become antiquated or worn out before the bonds are due. Constitutional protection to taxpayers against such a situation will be guaranteed if the proposed debt limit amendment is adopted at the election on November 3. In the first place the amendment prevents an issue of bonds for any improvement that has an estimated usefulness of less than 5 years. Any improvement that won't stand up for 5 years must be paid for out of current tax receipts. If the taxing district hasn't got the money to pay for what it wants it must do without it; the local government cannot go out and borrow by the bond route. In the second place bonds cannot be issued to run for a period longer than the probable life of the improvement and, as stated, the probable life of the improvement must be at least 5 years.

To date the joint committee has gathered figures on the bonded indebtedness of 93 cities in Ohio. These figures, which show the status of the debt as of June 30, 1924, are staggering. Read:

Spec. Assessment Debt	54,769,589.47
GRAND TOTAL	$425,456,736.90

Perhaps the most astonishing aspect of the foregoing statement of city indebtedness is revealed by the items for deficiency and refunding purposes. The deficiency bonds represent debt which has been incurred to meet the ordinary day-to-day operating expenses of government, while refunding bonds are those which have been sold to pay off other bonds which had already run for a term of years but for the retirements of which no money had been accumulated. This portion of the debt represents a dead weight upon the taxpayer because he has little or nothing to show for it and is the result, in many instances, of unsound financing in the past.

Note the growth of Municipal indebtedness. The combined debt for all cities in 1910 was $150,366,590.00; in 1920 $288,989,229.00 and in 1924 $425,456,736.90. The increase since 1910 is, therefore, 283 per cent.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture.
It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Tomorrow is election day and the matter of voting is more than a privilege; it is a duty.

Apathy on election day can do more perhaps, than any other one thing to destroy the government of which we are all so justly proud. For whom you vote is not so important as is your duty to express your preference at the polls.

On the Republican ticket will be found the names of three candidates all worthy and well qualified.

Henry C. Renick has served one term as mayor of the city and gave us a clean, wholesome, effective administration and is now a candidate for a second term.

Chris A. Weldon has served our people as city solicitor and county prosecutor, is now a candidate for the first named place. His former record in the office is a sufficient guaranty of his ability and faithfulness.

Clark Will, the candidate for the office of City Treasurer is assistant cashier of the Third National bank. He is thoroly qualified, is a young man of excellent character and would make a splendid city treasurer.

VACANT PULPITS

A distinct loss was suffered Sunday by two of the churches of Circleville when Rev. Edwin K. Johnson, of the First Methodist Episcopal, and Rev. Floyd E. Logee, of the First Presbyterian, severed their pastorates to enter and other larger fields of labor.

This loss, however, is not limited to these two churches, but will be felt by the entire city and county, for their influence and usefulness were not confined to their respective congregations.

Rev. Johnson leaves the local church after three years of service to take up the superintendency of the Zanesville district and will live in Newark.

Rev. Logee, after five years as pastor here, goes to Birmingham, Michigan, to accept a pastorate in that growing suburb of Detroit.

The law of compensation still holds good, and while the separation at the same time from these two good friends is most keenly felt, their passing together makes it somewhat easier for the writer, as whatever good things might be said of one can with equal truth and sincerity be spoken of the other, and no evil can be charged against either.

Both have been true ministers of God and both have endeavored industriously and conscientiously to advance his kingdom. Both have been blessed with a large measure of success and both have been called to spheres of greater promise of usefulness.

While we regret exceedingly to lose two such upstanding citizens, we congratulate them on their well deserved promotions, and we also congratulate the Presbyterian church of Birmingham and the Zanesville district of the Methodist faith.

The best wishes of all the people of Circleville and Pickaway county, irrespective of church affiliations, will follow Rev. Logee and Rev. Johnson to their new homes, and their prayer will always be that as they serve their Master in other fields, the sunshine of His favor will be told in an abundant harvest of saved souls.

While we are sorry to part with these loved preachers and their estimable families, we are hoping that their places may speedily be filled by others who will successfully carry on the work so well begun.

Vote for Chris Weldon for City Solicitor.

Hats and Humor Ever in Close Association

Popular opinion will agree with the British scientist at Toronto who finds that the human hat is the most humorous thing in nature. The irresistible appeal of a small hat on a big man or a big hat on a small man has been demonstrated by the centuries, or at least ever since the male headcovering ceased to be a bonnet and became a hat.

Exception, however, might be taken to the suggestion that a hat which blows off is funny primarily because it is a hat. The basic reason for laughter in such a case is that it blows off, the hat being the only article of apparel which is capable of sudden separation from its owner. If shoes were as easily detachable, the spectacle of a middle-aged man chasing his shoe up Broadway would be just as funny.

Sitting down on a hat is unquestionably the most humorous operation in nature. But there again the hat must be of stiff felt or straw, lending itself to the sense of irretrievable calamity reinforced by the noise of collapse. Sitting down on a fedora is much less funny than sitting down on a derby, and sitting down on an outing hat of the kind that can be carried in the pocket would not be funny at all. The comic stage today leans heavily upon a trawful of crockery suddenly dropped.

The classification of humor according to age strata is a highly dubious attempt. At the age of seven visual humor is supposed to change into verbal humor. In England "exaggeration stories" cease to interest after the age of thirteen. In this country they persist until the age of eighteen.

But as a rule it is hard to tell who makes a first dash for the Sunday comic supplement, the members of the family over the age of seven or those below. One counter-explanation would be, of course, that the celebrated intelligence tests have shown us to be a nation of twelve-year-olds. But in that case how would one account for the recent discovery of the comic strip and the slapstick by the intellectuals? —New York Times.

Word Has Odd Derivatives

Dr. C. C. Williamson in his book, "Curious Survivals," reminds us that the word "sack" has a strange origin and is connected with a curious story. We probably got that word "sack," he says, from a Coptic or Egyptian word "sak," which means a kind of canvas or cloth from which a bag was made, says the Youth's Companion.

The story is that the word "sak" was the last word uttered before the tongues were confounded at Babel and that consequently it appears in every language in an almost identical form. Curiously enough, the second statement is true.

The Irish "sac" is the same as the French word; the Latin "saccus" is closely related to the Italian "sacco" and to the Spanish "saco." In Greek, it is "sakkos," in Hebrew "sak" or "saq"; in Dutch "zak" and in Swedish "sack"; and the same word appears in many other languages without any real change. In slang or colloquial talk we now apply it in quite another fashion; when we talk of a person's getting the sack we intend delicately to intimate that he has been discharged from his employment. That use we probably derive from the Turkish custom of getting rid of undesirable persons by putting them into a sack and throwing them into the Bosphorus.

Policemen in Armor

Berlin police recently tried out with complete success the new suits of armor with which they have been equipped. A Russian murderer barricaded himself in a Gruenewald villa and defied the world. Thereupon the police strapped on their armor, walked calmly up and battered down the door, stopping several revolver bullets without harm to themselves. The new armor is composed of small overlapping scales and of double thick metal. The outside is steel, the inside a lightweight metal. The complete uniform consists of a headpiece, breastplate, body piece, backpiece, neck protector and leggings. There is also a shield which the police may carry in their hands to protect their faces. So resistant is the material that even steel bullets shatter on the scales or fall to the ground in crumbled bits. The German police believe they have found a complete protection against all small arms, including army rifles and machine guns. Breast, body and back pieces may be worn under ordinary clothing. The invention dates from 1921 and is now considered to have made good.

Marketing Made Easier

To relieve women shoppers of the bother of carrying parcels, a French inventor has designed a shopping basket which, when filled, can be wheeled like a baby carriage.

The basket is of wicker construction and light enough to be carried easily. When it is empty the wheels of the carriage fit inside the basket and the handle swings down over the sides.

When it is to be filled with bundles, says the Popular Science Monthly, the wheels are removed and the handles are swung back. Then the wheel axle is fitted and locked in brackets that are lowered at the bottom. The lid is locked down by the insertion of a pin through projecting loops, and the shopper is ready to wheel her purchases home.

HARTMAN THEATER.
x x x x x x x x

If you can't laugh, or won't laugh or don't want to laugh, pack up your troubles in the old kit bag and go down to the Hartman theater, Columbus, all next week starting Monday, November 2, and enjoy the world's greatest laugh hit "Is Zat So?" which is coming to the city direct from all-season engagements in New York and Chicago where the original companies are still playing to capacity audiences.

James Gleason and Richard Taber, authors of "Is Zat So?" labored for over four years to bring their attraction before the attention of the public. Earle Boothe and the Messrs. Shubert finally gave them an opportunity with the result that "Is Zat So?" gives every indication of not only elevating these hitherto obscure players into stardom, but also reaping for them a huge monetary reward. James Gleason heads the New York company which is playing to capacity houses, and Richard Taber heads the Chicago company.

"Is Zat So?" is a gloriously delightful comedy replete with lines that evoke explosive laughs. It tells the story of a prize fighter and his manager, how they meet an inebriated member of the fashionable New York society, how they are installed in his home as butler and footman and how these two offsprings of New York's east side adjust the troubled home of the wealthy society man. The jargon of the prize fight ring are all faithfully caught and reproduced. One of the outstanding scenes in the play is an actual fistic encounter which takes place on the stage.

Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:15 sharp. Evening performances at 8:15 sharp. Mail orders will be given prompt attention.

OTHER STATES POINT THE WAY

Uniform Rule Has Been Generally Discarded.

PROPOSAL NO EXPERIMENT

Ohio Will Not Be Taking a Step in the Dark If It Adopts Pending Tax Amendment

Columbus—Comparison of Ohio's constitution with the constitutions of other States similar to Ohio in the matter of agricultural and industrial development leaves no opportunity for contradiction of the statement that Ohio is clinging to a tax system which forward-looking States have discarded.

Whenever the people of a State are considering a proposal to change a specific provision of its constitution it is natural to turn to other States to learn what they have done. It is obvious, from the study of constitutions of other States made by the committee, that Ohio would not be blindly experimenting by the adoption of the pending amendment to the uniform rule.

Connecticut is unique in that its constitution contains no provisions bearing expressly upon taxation or using that term. The people of that State have not found it necessary to give the legislature any specific instructions in the constitution as to how the taxing power shall be used.

In Massachusetts the language of the constitution as to taxation gives as broad powers as does that of Connecticut but it is different in that it is specific, thus:

"Full power and authority are hereby given and granted to the general court (legislative assembly) to impose and levy proportional and reasonable assessments, rates, and taxes upon all inhabitants of, and persons resident and estates lying within, the Commonwealth; and also to impose and levy reasonable duties and excises upon any produce, goods, wares, merchandise, and commodities whatsoever, brought into, produced, manufactured, or being within the same."

Pennsylvania's constitution speaks clearly and sharply its disregard of the proposition that all forms of property shall be assessed for taxation by a uniform rule, in this language:

"All taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws."

New York's constitution gives to its law-making body wide open powers in the matter of taxation except for the injunction that it shall not enact any "private or local" law exempting any persons, firms or corporations from taxation on real or personal property.

Maine's constitutional tax provision is much like the amendment now pending in Ohio. Read Maine's provision:

"All taxes upon real and personal estates shall be apportioned and assessed equally according to the just value thereof; but the legislature may levy a tax upon intangible personal property at such rate as it deems wise and equitable without regard to the rate applied to other classes of property."

Vermont's constitution expresses the will of its people concerning tax laws in words that are unusual but certain of purpose. There is no uniform rule in Vermont's constitution. Vermont says:

"Every member of society hath a right to be protected in the enjoyment of life, liberty, and property, and therefore is bound to contribute his proportion toward the expense of that protection and yield his personal services, when necessary, or an equivalent thereto, but no part of any person's property can be justly taken from him or applied to public uses without his own consent or that of the representative body of freemen, nor can any man who is conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms be justly compelled thereto, if he will pay such equivalent, and previous to any law being made to raise a tax, the purpose for which it is to be raised ought to appear evident to the legislature to be of more service to the community than the money would be if not collected."

Iowa, Arizona, California, Colorado, Delaware, Kentucky, District of Columbia, Idaho, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Michigan—these and the States named in preceding paragraphs have no uniform rule of taxation in their constitutions.

Illinois is voting next year upon an amendment to break the uniform rule in that state.

No State which discarded the uniform rule now has it in its constitution.

The people of Ohio will have an opportunity at the election November 3 to modify the uniform rule which for more than three-quarters of a century has made it impossible to devise and create an equitable and scientific tax system for this State.

The Right Answer

"Should wives be paid wages?" asks a writer in a recent article in a magazine.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENTERTAINED

One of the most delightful of the many parties that Mrs. Grace Ritz's Sunday school class has had was held last evening at the home of Mrs. Paul Betz in Pleasant street. The committee in charge included Mrs. Betz, Mrs. R. P. Reid and Mrs. Robert Denman. The house was transformed into a haunt for ghosts by the use of pumpkin faces, and Halloween decorations. The only light was furnished by the pumpkin faces and candles. The guests were all masked and much amusement was afforded by the guessing contests that ensued. A delicious lunch appropriate for the occasion was served to about twenty-two members of the class.

Mosquito at Home in All Countries

The mosquito is perhaps of all insects the most widely distributed throughout the world. There is absolutely no known land that is not infested with at least one variety of it—and there are at least 150 varieties. England has, indeed, claimed to be free from them, but that is only because they are called gnats, though they are mosquitoes, all the same.

It is stated on scientific authority that not only the eggs but also the larvae of mosquitoes—the familiar “wigglers”—may be frozen solidly within blocks of ice and thus kept for an indefinite time, only to be as vital as ever when they are thawed out. The entire life-cycle, from the laying of the egg, through the various larval and pupal stages, to the laying of eggs by the new generation, comprises only a few weeks. Complaints have been made by miners and others in the Yukon region and at Cape Nome, of the almost intolerable plague of those insects in northern Alaska.—Detroit News.

Your city of Circleville needs money to operate the same as you do. Vote in favor of the two mill levy and provide the officials with funds to pay the bills. No additional taxes will result as it merely continues the levy already in force.

AMUSEMENTS

Bustles, burlesques, sewing circles and waistlines, have been thrown more or less in the discard. They are revived again, at least temporarily, on the local screen at the Metropolitan theater where Hobart Henley's production of "The Denial" is showing.

This is one of the most interesting pictures of the year. It is fast moving. It has a prologue and an epilogue of the present day linked up with the main story which takes place in the year, 1897, a time many can remember, but few think of as being old-fashioned until they view what was then, and how hopelessly passe it is now.

There is a tremendous theme to the story which escapes being a tragedy by showing what takes place 28 years later. It makes one see clearly how easily the tragedies of the day are swept aside by time and are forgotten in the rush of ever new things arising. A really great message is subconsciously carried in this film play, which was adapted to the screen by Agnes Christine Johnston from the stage play by Lewis Beach.

Claire Windsor has the big role, the only one which is carried thru both periods of the story. Emily Fitzroy has her greatest characterization, and portrays an overbearing woman in a way that is intensely real.

Vivia Ogden as Aunt Effie is both funny and pathetic and William Haines as the hero is well cast. Others of importance are Edward Connelly, Bert Roach, Lucille Rickson and Robert Agnew.

The picture was made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

MAN'S MEMORY OF HIS CANINE PETS

Dogs One Has Owned Not Easily Forgotten.

A man may mark and remember the various periods of his life in many ways—by his work, his income, or abode. But the true dog-lover does it by his dogs.

It is extraordinary how vividly the memory of each canine pet springs to mind to symbolize the period to which it belonged. There was Tinker, that fat, lazy, good-tempered retriever of your childhood, who let you pull his tail, ride on his back, and shove him about all over the place. Tender recollections of your own parents are aroused at sight of that faded photograph of his shaggy head.

Then there was Spree, that rakish, devil-may-care, rather flash fox-terrier you had at eighteen. How quarrelsome, conceited, narrow-minded and touchy about his rights he was—just like his master! He, too, marks a definite period.

After that, perhaps, there followed dogless years when your brief strutting on the stage of adolescence finished, you settled down to frugal living and hard work.

Your next dog came when you were married and started a new life in a home of your own. Probably, as you look back across the vanished years, Jane seems to you the favorite dog of all, companion in the struggles and successes of what should be the happiest time in every man's life. So gentle and affectionate she was, so understanding and loyal, never seeing your faults, taking you for granted, making the best of you always, supplying you with many a silent lesson for your own soul's good, if you were not too proud or blind to take it.

Leo, the mastiff, marked your migration into a larger house with ample grounds. He saw you and your wife into comfortable maturity, and your children well started on their respective journeys into the big outside world before he died.

Education expenses being done with forever, you bought that big touring car you had always dreamed of, and spent your ampler leisure traveling about. Your regular companion at this period was Bill the bulldog, who developed such a passion for motoring that he would sit on the front seat beside you, sniffing the air for hours, and would have defended the car in your absence with his life.

And then your last and living dog, black Sambo, the spaniel, who is growing old and deaf along with you. His pleasure is to sit by the blazing fire and doze, a conservative dog of fixed and punctual habits, abhorring Bolshevism and change.

Six generations of dogs you have loved, and outlived, and partially forgotten, transferring your affections lightly from one to another. If it be fated for Sambo to outlive you, will he prove less faithful to your memory, or will he take his bones and gravy with unimpaired gusto from the hands of another?—M. S. in the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

FACULTY OF THINKING NOW ON TOBOGGAN

Members of the "Strategy Board" Around Grocery Are Now Speeders.

The old fable of the Hare and the Tortoise has lost most of its significance. When we take a large view of life today, we are forced to conclude that "the race is nearly always to the swift." This is the age of speed and keeping pace with the march of events calls for an agility both mental and physical. As a result of the swift pace we have set for ourselves one of the keenest of pleasures has been crowded out of most of our lives.

It used to be that men had time for contemplation; time to consider the general fitness of things; time to weigh the advantages of a well ordered life and time to live one. Humanity faced its problems, of course, just as it always will, but snap judgment was the exception, rather than the rule, and you and I today are enjoying many of the fruits of the calm and unhurried thought which our fathers were able, and anxious to give to various far reaching problems as they arose. It was, in fact, this habit of always taking thought which made possible this glorious republic in which we live today.

Those earlier men looked to the future, considered posterity, moved cautiously—and thoughtfully. "Eat, drink and be merry" had little standing with the thinkers of yesterday. A decade ago it was generally popular to ridicule the "cracker-box conferences" around the barrel stove in the general store, or that conclave of leisurely thinkers who were wont to assemble behind the prescription counter in the village drug store, or upstairs in lawyer Smith's office, over Odd Fellows Hall. Nevertheless, I doubt if we of today will ever experience the same pleasure and profit which was the product of this over ridiculed exchange of opinion.

Yet it was not always the momentous matter which occupied the thoughts of our more leisurely yesterday. It is more probable that many obtained more pleasure from abstract contemplation. There is so much in this world to give men pause, the wonder is that it ever became out of fashion to think. I am not old, yet I can remember when scores of people "walked out to the country" on a Sunday; wandered about, close to nature, paused often to indulge themselves to the fullest in the glory of a spring, summer or autumn countryside. That their thoughts were not rich with the surpassing wonder of life an nature, is inconceivable. It seems to me that there must have been more genuine pleasure packed into an hour or two spent thus, than could be wrung out of a week in an automobile, whirling ceaselessly thru endless traffic, pausing most often to "refresh" oneself at a "hot-dog" stand or a "tourist's rest." But maybe I'm wrong; maybe I haven't learned how to get the newer thrill.

Anyway, I am still old-fashioned enough to like a ponder; and the hurry and worry which seems so inseparable a part of the life which would reap the large financial harvest, appears to me to have robbed us of a pleasure which nothing else can supplant.

I have no quarrel with golf. I believe that Rotary club luncheons are a wonderful educational advantage, industrial conferences conducive of more perfect efficiency and enhanced profits; nevertheless, when all is said and done, and each of us is finally overtaken by that grim reaper which no speed we can devise will outstrip, the cumulative product of all our efficiency and speed will, I think, count no whit more, if indeed as much, as the heritage of those priceless moments spent in the pleasant business of thinking; for out of thinking has come and will continue to come, all of the genuine progress which we humans enjoy here in this wonderful world.

ALL SAINTS' DAY

As we pass down the vista of years in our journey through life, the meaning of All Saints' Day grows richer, more spiritual and joyful. In youth we look upon this day as a mystic, almost unmeaning observance. But as the years go by and we are deprived, one by one, of the loved ones who have meant so much to us and who have formed, indeed, such an important part of our existence and leave us without their earthly presence to counsel, cheer and guide, we begin to understand the real meaning of this day and the blessed hope it is trying to give us. And, in the darkness of this chaotic old world we can see the brightness if we will—God's own sunlight, more, indeed, than the "silver lining within every cloud."

We can find in our Lord's Supper that in some manner, we know not how, He is there as He was with His disciples that memorable night, as near, yet unseen. And this we know, not by argument and debate, mathematical precision or worldly wisdom, but because God has created us "after His own image" with the spiritual instinct to know and to feel—the best proof and knowledge on earth.

"The Communion of Saints"—does it not mean that they who have passed out into the unseen life are with us not only in memory but closer than the air we breathe? Who still rejoice in our rejoicing and sorrow in our sorrow? With this spirit, surely, we live, we really live, and rejoice in the life here and the life hereafter.

DAVID McDONALD.

Mere Man Criticizes Female "Tidying Mania"

Man puts things out of the way whenever the occasion for doing so arises. For example, he finds his room in a disorderly state. Too many pairs of boots make themselves noticeable; and the brushes, gloves and pipes on the table would bring tears to a woman's eyes.

He resolves to straighten things up, which means putting them away somewhere else. The superfluous boots are crowded under the bed; smaller articles are thrust into drawers; the cigarette ash is flung into the grate, and speedily his room is in order.

Now, the result of this process is highly satisfactory. Not only have things been put out of the way, but their owner is in a position to find them again as soon as he wants them. The boots can be poked out from under the bed with a stick at any time. Similarly, the collar, gloves and pipes can be exhumed when required, says London Answers.

Yet woman makes this masculine "tidying up" a subject for derision. She declares that it is the worst form of disorder.

To put things away, as women put them away, is equivalent to complete concealment. The feminine desire to put things away in this manner amounts almost to a passion. Curiously enough, however, it is always the things of other people—husband or children—that she thus buries.

Her own she wisely keeps where they are ready to hand. It is only the possessions of others that she considers out of place when they are visible. Her chief object in life is to put these things away where no one can see them, and she puts them away so thoroughly that she herself cannot remember where they are.

Books and papers that a man is apt to need at any moment are always "tidied" away by woman with eager enthusiasm. Nothing, indeed, is safe from them. Even clothes are sometimes hidden so completely that their owner is convinced they must have been sold or stolen.

Speaking of Pins

Though a majority of women now have bobbed hair, hairpin factories still do a big business. Part of this business is due to the fact that so many hairpins are lost. Six people in a five-mile walk in London picked up 327 lost hairpins.

A few words in regard to your Poultry Drops. My flock had a sneezing cold that developed into Deadly Roup. After I began with your medicine I lost only a few birds which were badly infected, the sneezing in the rest of my flock began to disappear.

In a few weeks' time there was a great difference in my flock of 200 English Leghorn pullets; they began to develop and get red combs and wattles. I am sure Fickardt's Roup and Cholera Drops will help in egg production, for a healthy bird is bound to lay if it gets the proper feeds.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides. Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

An Error in Diagnosis

"IS IT anything serious?" Mrs. Nordlaw looked at her physician with apprehension as he studied his thermometer and felt her pulse. "That remains to be seen," replied the physician solemnly and with a wise glance. "What have been your symptoms?" "Why, I've had flushes and chills, nervousness, fluttering here,"—she indicated her heart—"and strange alterations of depression and—" "Yes—yes! I understand." "I'm naturally strong, am I not, doctor? You've said so more than once." "Naturally. Yes. But even the strong, you know, are sometimes—" "But, really, is there anything to fear? I am terribly nervous, as you see!" "Your condition may be temporary—your indisposition slight. Your appetite is—" "Oh, always the same. Good. I ate a very hearty dinner last night, and it wasn't until after breakfast this morning that I felt so strange I thought I should go back to bed and call you." "Do you eat much candy?" and he indicated a partly emptied box on the bed. "I love it! I eat it whenever I crave sweets. And that happens to be often." "So? But too much is not good for you. How about exercise—your activities? You go about a good deal—and perhaps dance much?" "Why, I'm on the go all the time! As for dancing, really, I can't refrain from it. I adore it!" "Well, tell me of your activities, say, for the past two or three days." "Let's see. This is Sunday, is it not?" "Yes. Don't you hear the church bells? I was about to start for church when you called me. Do you go to church very often?" "Always on special occasions. And now and then. My late husband was not a church-goer, you know." There was a suspicion of a tear. "But you must not think me a barbarian, doctor!" "No. You are full of life and must have social excitement. Quite right." "But as to my activities, what I do one day is much like what I do another—except as to Sundays. Yesterday, for example, I rose early to attend the auction of the belongings of the Princess Zou-Zou. She was quite the model for dress and other things, you know. I just wanted to see what she had. Then I kept an engagement for luncheon and danced at the same place—" "How long?" "Why, until it was time to come home and dress for dinner, which I took out. And then I danced again until—until—they closed, you know. They closed quite early, because today is Sunday." "And if it had been Friday or Thursday, you might have danced longer?" "I might, I'll confess." "You must refrain from dancing for two or three days and get more sleep. And here's a prescription that may help. It is nothing serious. Good-day!" As the physician retired the "phone rang. Mrs. Nordlaw answered, "Who is this? Oh, Mr. Belford! Call you Jack? Somebody may be listening! Well, then, Jack! Call you dear Jack? Why, Mr. . . . Jack! Afraid to propose last night? Why, Jack! Dear Jack, then! . . . Oh! Oh! Well, I'll give you an answer tonight, Jack! I've called you that once, haven't I?" And she rang off, laughing happily. In a moment she stopped laughing and began to sing. Then she began to dress hurriedly. A maid entered. "Mrs. Rundell is waiting, ma'am. She said you had called her up." "Bring her right in, Flora." And Mrs. Nordlaw continued her song. "Why, dear!" said Mrs. Rundell, a very pretty woman, entering. "You said you were ill, and here you are as gay as a girl. You were even singing. And I met the doctor at the door going out as I came in!" "Yes." "And you look just as happy as you've looked for weeks dancing with Jack Belford." "Yes. And what do you think of a widow—a widow, mind you—who mistook a plain case of love for some serious illness?"

"How About Exercise—Your Activities?"

STATELY ELM TREE OVERCAME BIG HANDICAP

Tiny Sprout Rent Asunder Large Boulder In Its Early Growth and Prospered Without Assistance of Human Hands.

What may seem a likely story will be vouched for as the truth by William H. Cordray, of Ashville, a retired farmer of Muhlenberg township, this county, who watched the growth of a tiny elm sprout on his farm and saw it develop into a stately elm of five feet and three inches in circumference in the span of thirty-six years.

That this insignificant sprout should grow to become the fine tree that it is may not be unbelievable, but considering the handicap it surmounted it seems almost incredible that it grew from its origin to a tree of symmetrical contour, a fine specimen.

Mr. Cordray purchased his farm of one hundred acres which is in part in two townships, Jackson and Muhlenberg, on the east bank of Big Darby creek, thirty-six years ago. In the orchard about one hundred feet from the dwelling house, there stood a large boulder of several tons in weight. When clearing the premises, Mr. Cordray discovered a tiny elm sprout one foot in height and no thicker than a rye straw, which had taken root in a small fissure of the boulder, which was but a few inches in length which he states was too narrow to admit a knife blade only to a trifling depth. He first thought of destroying the small sprout when it dawned upon him to let it grow and observe the result, but believed it would perish without sufficient soil to nourish it.

The tiny sprout continued its growth; its roots must have followed a blind fissure in the rock and continued the growth steadily until it gained sufficient strength to rent the massive boulder into three nearly equal parts, thus the roots found permanent life in the soil some six feet beneath the boulder bed since which time it has thrived and developed into the stately tree that it now is.

Mr. Cordray displayed a picture of the tree which certainly would not indicate that such a struggle had been encountered for existence. In the picture may be seen the three fragments of rock still indented into the growth of the roots and trunk of the tree.—Ashville News.

At last it is proved that a home heater can be good looking—ornamental, if you will—as well as a practical heat-producing utility.

The Mueller Furnacette marks the greatest advance in home heating equipment since the invention of the heating stove. It is the joint creation of master furniture designers and skilled heating engineers. There is distinction in every line of its well-balanced, walnut-grained, vitreous enamel cabinet.

And as for heat—never was there an above-floor heater of any kind that could compare with the Furnacette in heating efficiency! It heats the whole house by continuously re-circulating warm, moist air thru all the rooms. It provides more comfortable, more uniform heat than two or three stoves combined, yet uses no more fuel than an ordinary heating stove.

Sold on convenient monthly payments.

pause. "Oh, Willie!"
Voice from the bed: "Um?"
"Willie, get up, you know school begins today."
"I know it does."
"Well, then, get up."
"Uh, huh. Is my new suit pressed?"
"Yes, Willie."
"Shoes shined?"
"Yes, Willie."
"Father leave the car?"
"Yes, Willie, it's waiting for you out in front."
"Know where my fountain pen is?"
"I filled it and have it here."

day."—Ottawa (Kan.) Herald.

New Motor Fuel

A new motor alcohol made from mollasses and the juice of the sugar palm is said to make starting easy and eliminate knocking and carbon troubles.
Its disadvantage is the cost of manufacture, but extensive experiments are being made in Hawaii to overcome this.

JACKSON WILL VOTE ON LEVY FOR SCHOOLS

Is Simply Continuation of What Has Been Paid for Past Five Years.

The three mill school levy is to be presented to the voters of Jackson township at the November election.

Six years ago Jackson township voted this three mill levy for a five year period. It expired this past year and if the Jackson township school is to continue to give its boys and girls the proper educational advantages, it will be necessary to vote this same levy again at the coming election. All voters should bear in mind that this is not an additional levy on what they are now paying but simply a continuation at the same rate for another five year period.

A few years ago the state school laws permitted a five mill local school levy. The legislature then changed it to three mills and gave the people of the township the privilege of voting an extra three mill levy, if needed.
Most of the townships of the state have found it necessary to carry the extra three mill levy and most of them have passed it.

If the levy fails to pass there will result a deficit of approximately $8370 the school's operating expenses for the current year. If it should fail it is hard to foresee all the difficulties which would be presented in the continued operation of the school. It would probably mean that the school year would have to be shortened enough to meet this deficit. It might mean that the number of teachers and drivers would need to be reduced, which would result in the school's standard being lowered.

Every voter in the township should realize that the school cannot maintain its present standard during the next five years of this levy should fail.

Treasurer.

"The Store That Treats You Right."

None BUT The Rich Can Afford Cheap CLOTHES

In the final analysis "cheap"
Clothes are expensive at any price.

They are seldom styled to retain their shape, consequently do not wear well, leaving a sense of disappointment to the wearer.

To delude yourself with the idea that because the initial price is small is false economy, because there is no saving in money. It is good judgment however, to buy your clothes from a wear investment standpoint and such clothes are
